Notice.

All persons having garbage, etc., for removal by the City Scavenger, are requested to have the same in readiness before 8 o'clock A.M. After that hour the cartmen are otherwise employed, and will not call until the following morning, thus leaving the unsightly boxes or barrels in front of your premises all day.

STREET CLEANING.

The work is going on. That is certain. A gang of men armed with hoes, rakes and shovels, is distributed along the principal thoroughfares scraping up the accumulations of muck, dust, debris and manure which have given so much offence to the aesthetically disposed portion of the inhabitants. The work has now been in progress for several days. Some of the streets are showing a greatly improved appearance. There is no mistaking that fact. The plan of operations nevertheless is one that it may not be judicious to mention. But as it is evidently original, and one which Mr. Kalkawaha, the contractor, may be disposed to claim special credit for, it ought to be fully described. It is only necessary to be widely known to secure for the new official a share of the fame that falls to the lot of the ingenious and enterprising, the world over. In case the plan should be adopted by other cities, the honor of Hawaii requires that it should at once be announced and designated emphatically the Honolulu method of cleaning streets. This being done, it will not be in the power of any smart Yankee civic official to introduce the scheme and appropriate the honors of inventing it.

A considerable amount of abuse has been heaped upon the heads of the conservators of our civic rights and comforts during the past three months for the dirty condition of the streets. Whether this had anything to do with the operations recently commenced is no part of our business to determine. But there does seem to be a sort of sarcastic humor about the processes now going on. They have gone to work to clean the streets certainly. And the grumblers are grumbling with bated breath, although they cannot but have some rather disagreeable notions that Mr. Kalkawaha has thrown them out of the frying pan into the fire. Those who howled at the powers that be for the unsightly and unsalubrious dirtiness under their feet are now being choked with immeasurable quantities of the same stuff going down their throats, in at their doors and windows, and demonstrating to them in the most palpable manner that the streets are being cleaned, for—was not that just what they wanted? Whether the method adopted is a sort of sarcastic way of doing what the public have long enough been waiting for, or an accidental peculiarity some people have of performing the plainest services in the worst manner possible, or both, is not of much consequence to determine. If it is a joke, it certainly is a rather dirty one. And those disaffected people who would not let the authorities alone, "at all at all," have, unquestionably, had their mouths closed as they went about the streets during the past week, and, according to present indications, are likely to keep quiet enough outdoors, for some weeks to come. Of course it would be audacious to suggest, in this connection, that possibly the street cleaning operations may go on until after the elections.

The foregoing remarks may be considered impertinent, and not consistent with the dignity of public journalism in the treatment of a matter of public interest; but any person who will take a walk or a drive along the line of the street cleaning operations cannot fail to be impressed with the ridiculous manner in which the contract is being carried out. The dirt of the streets is scraped up into small hillocks, from six to eight feet apart. It is then left to dry, a process that only requires a few hours in the tropical sun. The drying process, however, is allowed to go on from day to day, and the dust, muck, manure and debris become thoroughly pulverized. The trade winds come tearing down the valley or in from the ocean, and a large portion of every hillock of pulverized dirt is taken up in shovelfuls, carried through the air and hurled pell-mell into the faces of all meddlesome citizens who never would be satisfied while the dirt was left undisturbed under their feet. On those streets along which the scraping up business has been prosecuted during the past week, the flying dirt has been absolutely terrible. It seems, too, to be impossible to get to windward of the dirt-laden breezes, for the hillocks have been so ingeniously placed that from whatever art the wind blows, there is no avoiding the infliction. Not only is the air charged with the pulverized accumulations of the streets, but the hillocks of dirt are, many of them, re-spread by the gales over the places whence they came, to be scraped up again in more disintegrated condition, only to be the more easily whirled about by the breezes of a subsequent day. After the hillocks have lain long enough, to be effective for the purposes above specified, a cart comes along and takes what is left of them away. And this is cleaning the streets in Honolulu. If the plan is not unique in its originality, it is surely unique in its ingenuity, that is, if it has been adopted with a view to punishing the citizens for previous insubordination.

We have only a single suggestion to make, and perhaps, the contracting party, Mr. Kalkawaha, may be discreet enough to adopt it. Its plain practicability may, however, be fatal to its adoption. But we shall hope for the best, and will demand no fees for the advice. It is,—Do not scrape up dirt any faster than it can be carted away, and cart it away as fast as it can be scraped up.

THE LATE MRS. S. J. LYMAN.

Hilo has again been called to mourn the loss of another of the early missionaries whose numbers have been so depleted in recent years. Mrs. Sarah Joiner Lyman, wife of the Rev. David Belden Lyman, died at Hilo, Dec. 7, 1885. She had been in feeble health for some time, but the day before her death had attended service at the Hail Church, on which occasion the text of the sermon was Phil. 1:20. "According to my earnest expectation and my hope that in nothing I shall be ashamed, but that with all boldness, as always, so now also Christ shall be magnified in my body, whether it be by life or by death." On both occasions the aged Mrs. Hitchcock, who was a member of the same missionary reinforcement, and who is now residing at Hilo, sat next to Mrs. Lyman. It was a very touching and beautiful sight to see these venerable mothers seated side by side among the people for whom they had labored so lovingly. Mrs. Lyman was considerably wearied Sunday from the effort to attend church, and complained of being cold in the evening. But her son, Hon. F. S. Lyman, who spent the evening with her in company with others, observed that she was unusually bright and talkative. She said to a little granddaughter, "Now, you must wrap up warm before you go home, because it is cold." That night she retired as usual and sweetly fell asleep in Jesus. In the morning when her room was entered she was lying peacefully in that last slumber which has no awakening this side eternity. There was no trace of suffering or pain. The angel of death had called the dear mother home to her eternal rest. Recent tidings of the death of a very promising grandson had made her heavy-hearted for her afflicted son and doubtless hastened her death. But she was ripe for eternity and 'she was not, for God took her.' On the anniversary of her 80th birthday a deputation of young men from the boarding school called to congratulate her on behalf of the whole school, and her messages to the school as well as her conversation with the young men will long be remembered as the parting words of one whose relation to the school was indeed that of mother.

The funeral services were held at the Hail Church, at which a large audience was present. The pallbearers were all graduates of the school (one of whom is the only surviving member of the first class, the class of 1836), whose tender regard for the deceased was like that of bereaved sons. Remarks were made by the Rev. E. P. Baker, and the Rev. W. B. Oleson, those of the latter being interpreted by Hon. D. H. Hitchcock. The scriptures were read and prayer offered by the Rev. J. Kalana, the pastor of the native church, who is also a graduate of the school. The united choirs of the native and foreign churches sang "Jesus, Lover of my Soul," and "Asleep in Jesus," and the boarding school boys sang in softest strains a hymn that had been composed by Hon. J. K. Nawahi on the occasion of Father Lyman's funeral, a little over a year ago. "When Jesus comes," a special favorite of Mother Lyman's, was sung over her grave.

Thus has passed to her reward one whose life had been serene and joyful in the service of the Master. How much richer the world is for such saintly lives and such constancy of faith in the Saviour.—Com. from Hilo, Dec. 11.
